fire from guns fore and aft. In bold lettering over the picture, Cowen says: "Submitted to Lord Palmerston and his colleagues and by them submitted to a select committee of the most experienced veterans of the age—supposed to be (?) but in reality washed out old Women and senile Old Tabbies at Woolwich whither I caused the machine, models, plans, etc., to be conveyed, mark—at my own expense."

"For Johnny Bull is a craven animal after his truly Beloved God—Money; and never parts with it willingly, but freely allows himself to be robbed of it by his rulers and taskmasters while he dozes dreams of his Freedom and Liberty; and this Idol of Lucre he has only obtained after wading ankle deep in blood all over the world—and this is his greatness!"

Cowen asserts in a note at the bottom of his pamphlet that the select committee of veterans refused to consider his plans because the ram could not be officered by a host of poor relations of the Upper Ten Thousand "supported by half starved serfs." He was undoubtedly venting his spleen upon men who refused to consider

BRITISH "ARMORED TANKS"

INVENTED IN 1854

By Hal O'Flaherty, United Press Staff Correspondent.

London, Oct. 4.—(By mail.)—The armored cars or "tanks" as they are called, which walk through stone walls and over trenches, are far from being a new idea in warfare. Way back in 1854, an inventor named James Cowen, constructed a "tank" similar to those now in use on the British front, except that it was propelled by steam instead of gasoline.

Cowen described his invention as a land and sea locomotive steam ram and battery. It was capable, so he told Lord Palmerston, then premier, of effectually annihilating cavalry and infantry and crushing artillery batteries. Unfortunately, the authorities refused to build or help build any of the machines, much to Cowen's dismay.

The inventor was so enraged over the government's refusal of his plans that he issued a pamphlet telling the public of the wonderful death-dealing machine and of the pettiness of the men in power at that time. The pamphlet, reprinted in London papers today, shows Cowen's juggernaut, a heavily armored locomotive belching

WANT DEMOCRATIC CONGRESSMAN

By United Press.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 26.—Democratic party managers have concentrated their efforts to supplant the present Republican congressmen from the home district of Mrs. Wilson with a Democrat. It is the only Republican district in the state.

They are behind the candidacy of State Senator E. Lee Trinkle, from Mrs. Wilson's home town of Wytheville, to defeat Republican C. Bascome Slemm, candidate for re-election. Among those who have campaigned for Trinkle is Governor Stuart, who was himself beaten by Slemm six years ago.

Democratic candidates who expect to return to Washington are: William A. Jones, Edward E. Holland, Walter A. Watson, Andrew J. Montague, Edward W. Saunders, Carter Glass, C. C. Carlin and Hal D. Flood. Thomas W. Harrison is due to be named the successor of James Hay, who was chairman of the house military committee, and who resigned to accept appointment on the court of claims bench.

U. S. Senator Claude A. Swanson has no opposition. He will be the first U. S. senator chosen by direct vote in Virginia.
